Visits to national museums

and galleries in England
I'm going to give a report concerning ^{the} attendance of museums and galleries based on the chart taken from Social Statistics. The chart illustrates the attendance of such places from 2013 to 2017

The chart shows that ^{the} Natural History Museum and Science Museum used to draw on people's attention and their attendance was on a high rate in 2013. Although after admission charges having been introduced in 2014 the attendance of both museums respectively dropped in 2015.

In comparison to this decline, the attendance of Tate gallery changed from 0.9 million to 1.9 million by 2015, showing a substantial growth.

It is distinctly shown ⁱⁿ the chart that the attendance of museums and galleries which were not so popular went up straight after 2014. Both British Museum and National gallery had almost twice as more visitors than they had in 2013.

In 2017 the attendance of admission-free museums kept growing significantly. British Museum hit the record number of 5.6 million visitors in comparison to 1.6 million visitors of ~~the~~ Science Museum. National gallery and Tate gallery were quite popular as well. The only recommendation for these places is to keep doing great job.

Natural History Museum and Science Museum did not really appeal to visitors so it is wise for them to reconsider their admission charges policy and lower the fee.

To conclusion I would like to summarize all the information given. The attendance of all entrance-free museums increased sharply after 2014. Museums which introduced admission charges suffered from an abrupt decrease of visitors but still kept attracting visitors.
