The aim of this report is to assess the main information concerning the number of people visiting English national museums and galleries per year and make comparisons where necessary.

British Museum

As it is clearly evident from the chart, the rate of British Museum happens to be the highest as its attendance has respectively increased through the years. Perhaps, residents and tourists got more interested in the content the museum offers.

National Gallery

National Gallery seems to be the place of great interest as well. Although it is slightly less popular than British Museum mentioned above, National Gallery does draw on ~~the~~ ~~its~~ ~~the museum's~~ indicators.

Tate Gallery

~~It~~ It is fair to assume that Tate Gallery did not use to appeal to the visitors' standards. However, we ~~may~~ ~~also~~ observe a positive trend since it is slowly gaining popularity. I would recommend them to launch an advertisement programme so as to attract new visitors.

Natural History Museum and Science Museum

These places are the ones that require admission charges due to their substantial needs and, therefore, ~~compel~~ people to choose between cheaper prices and visiting their museums. ~~Unfortunately,~~ the chart provides a strong evidence ^{that} their indicators significantly dropped after introducing the new system. Perhaps, they should reduce the entrance fees for students.

To sum up, it is essential to stress that people awareness about the value of attending museums is rather high. They are particularly interested in such aspects as art, history and science. ≈ 240
